The demographics of our clients tell a story of great need in our community. Family violence is a public health issue that cuts across all races, ethnicities and socioeconomic lines. It hurts women, children and men with great ferocity. The clients we serve are also struggling against poverty. They have few resources to escape the violence in their homes.

African American women and their children represent the majority of those we serve. African American women are more likely to experience domestic violence than women of other races/ethnicities and are twice as likely to lose their lives to domestic violence than white women.\(^1\) Women and children of color, who make up the majority of the clients we serve, are particularly vulnerable due to financial insecurity and other socioeconomic factors.
